Letter from the Editors

Hello, friends and family. Our names are Avalene Morrison and Kennedy “Red” Jacobs-Skolik, this year’s Editor- and co-Editor-in-Chief for the 2024 yearbook. This year’s theme is Rebirth. You could describe rebirth as being recreated, but it can also be described as a rise after a fall, or the process of growing anew.

Rebirth is everywhere in our daily lives, like when the oranges fall from their trees and decompose in the earth to create richer soil for more oranges to grow. This process of falling and rising has continued since the start of time in its own big cycle. Buck’s Rock also follows this pattern, rising from struggles every summer as every great aspect of life does.

Rebirth has also become more important in our society. Since the pandemic shut down in-person camp in 2020 and 2021, Buck’s Rock has had to adapt to our new situation. Like a phoenix, we were reborn from what we once were. In camp, many shops have had to change and adapt to our new circumstances, but even with these difficulties we still managed to pull through thanks to the great community at Buck’s Rock.

Every year, the Buck’s Rock community proves to be great company—from staff in the Weaving shop to campers in Terrace, you can find a friend anywhere around camp.

Directors' Welcome

"If this is what we did last year, this is not what we're going to do this year."

Founder Ernst Bulova's words ring out proudly each summer at Buck's Rock, and in our 82nd summer, that attitude is more present than ever. The theme of this year's yearbook, REBIRTH, shares some special significance for us and our recent history: just four years from a complete rebirth in 2020 as a not-for-profit, Buck's Rock continues to be an inclusive space for people to be themselves. Ernst and Ilse's charge to adapt and grow each year is a challenge that we all strive to meet, and ensures that, even for longtime returners, there is no "typical" Buck's Rock summer.

In 2024, our space was reborn with a huge renovation of our Dining Hall and Porch, the center of camp life. To make it our own, second session campers completed a collaborative mural that adorns the refreshed space. New evening activities like "Hot Ones" and the "Hip Hop Show: Beatbox" complemented our annual staples like Rock Café and the Dance Show. Our performing arts shops pushed boundaries as they always do, encouraging camper collaboration with dance choreography, sketch writing, musical performances, and technical theater design. We even revived a Buck's Rock classic from years past—a camp-wide square dance, reuniting alumni with our campers in our first hoedown in over two decades. Our visual arts shops met our challenge of rebirth and change with thirst and vigor, breaking outside their artistic barriers to encourage cross-shop collaboration, low-stakes risk-taking, and artistic freedom.

Ultimately, for our campers, rebirth comes from within. It's the experience of being in a space where, perhaps for the first time, actions and accomplishments depend on one's own decisions and efforts. On Festival Day in August, our campers look back on their experiences with bittersweet excitement and empowerment. Camp may be coming to an end, but we all carry this summer with us as we return to our lives in the fall—energized from a newfound sense of strength and confidence borne out of self-expression and the experience of making one's own choices. What once seemed impossible now feels within reach.

Thank you for being a part of Buck's Rock in 2024 and for joining us on this journey. Next year promises a rebirth of ideas and discovery!

With love,

Scott, Antonia, and Lizzie

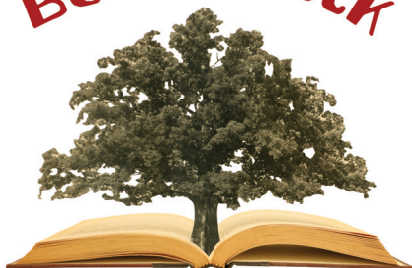

Buck's Rock has the ability to provide campers with opportunities to create art in a one-of-a-kind, free environment. Learning through these opportunities can help young people gain real world skills and self-confidence. Kids, CITs, and staff members alike make unique art like a well-oiled machine.

We are a not-for-profit camp where donations cover everything from tuition to shop materials—silver chains from Metals, T-shirts from P.A.S.S, and more. Buck's Rock runs on the generosity of our donors, and we thank you for all of your support.

Join our Buck's Rock community and become a donor today!

The abaca stinks and the pulpy water stains my jeans. But it will be worth it to see the pressed flowers in the pages of my new book.

Cutting paper for a book is hard. It never rips how I want it to.

But it will be worth it to have a notebook to collect my thoughts in. Sewing is simple, the thread feels nice, slides through the pages with ease.

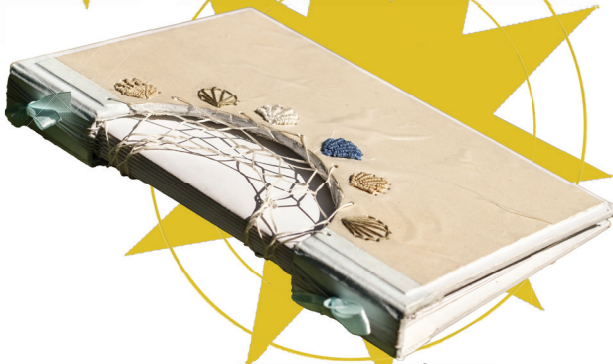

It's cool, breezy even, in Book Arts. It's relaxed. It's chill. It's where I want to be.

The Computers Shop is a workspace held together by various cables, crashing software, thrifted hardware, and endless creativity. Instead of having a pool of set and pre-defined tools, the Computers Shop repertoire and offerings evolve year to year, session to session. Driven by the campers' desires, our most popular program or activity is ephemeral in nature. Whether it's a summer filled with game-development or 3D modeling using Blender, everyone's welcome to a new experience, or a comforting long-standing hobby.

Come to C O M P U T E R S ! It's fun :)

Fabrication as a shop has been a running idea for decades - since camp is already a "Makerspace," where would a "FabLab" exist? Computers took on the role by acquiring various electronics equipment and a 3D printer - but there was still so much more it could be. In 2023, our shop acquired a CNC Endmill machine, and expanded to a second building. This year, we are separating Computers and Fabrication as two distinct shops that share resources and space. With the newest addition of a laser cutter, we are transforming into a workshop based space, focused on a variety of types of projects, from things that light up to designs that are meticulously carved. If we could describe Film Shop in one word this would be a much shorter blurb. The best part of the Film shop is our staff! With its ability to cast over 80 different spells, our staff is even stronger than the Staff of Grogon. Crafted by Skimore using the bark of the world's oldest tree, yes this is a good staff indeed. Not only can this staff produce fire and ice and the slime from life choose awards but also Grants Rebirth. Grant was the green ghoul that lived in the walls and living room of film shop until he got out and died because of a car :(but now he's alive again! YES!!!!!!

Glass

Imagine a piece of Glass that gets to be reborn over and over again. In Glassblowing, an Artist takes a simple lump of melted Glass and breathes life into it, shaping it into something beautiful and new.

Just like a Caterpillar transforms into a Butterfly, the Glass changes from a formless blob into a stunning vase, a delicate ornament, or a shiny marble.

This magical process of rebirth shows how something ordinary can become extraordinary with a little Creativity and skill.

After spending the day filing and refining, you take your metal to the flame. Watch as its original color disperses and countless new ones are born. The colors of heat rise and fall like deep breaths and for a moment it feels alive. Afterwards, the metal has changed. Its surface reflects the transformative process it went through. Once cool, the metal is dropped in a clear but powerful solution. A few minutes pass and the metal emerges with a completely different appearance. The swirls of dark, vibrant colors are wiped off and a clean, untouched surface is revealed. This piece will endure this experience time and time again. Like a phoenix, the metal burns but is reborn as something bright and new. Everything in metals is a metaphor. A metaphor.

Welcome to the Photo Shop at Buck's Rock Camp, where the Art of Photography is more than capturing moments—it's about experiencing the Rebirth of Creativity.

Here, budding Photographers are given the opportunity to borrow Cameras as powerful documentation tools, each time a chance to see the world anew through a fresh lens. We guide you through the intricacies of manual camera operation, empowering you to take control and breathe life into your vision.

In the Photo Shop, every click of the shutter is a step in the transformative journey of creation. We delve into the magical process of editing, where raw images evolve into artful masterpieces with every decision made. Embrace the rebirth of your ideas as you experiment with composition, light, and color, crafting photographs that tell your unique story.

At Buck's Rock Camp, the Photo Shop is not just a place to learn... it's a sanctuary where your photographic dreams (as well as your relationship with photography itself) are reborn, time and time again.

Puppetry

The Buck's Rock Puppet Shop is a swirling vortex of creative anarchy

The name of the shop is merely a suggestion—but since anything can be a puppet, and a puppet can be anything—campers in the space are free to experiment and explore with a wide variety of crafting mediums.

Introverts and extroverts alike become mad gods churning out characters and costumes and accessories; building tiny worlds or grand designs. Are puppeteers artists? Actors? Storytellers? Dramaturges? Satirists? Sculptors? Engineers? Inventors? Clowns? Absurdist? Lunatics? Yes. Yes we are. And also so much more.

Long before humanity bestowed a name on time itself, our communities gathered around the light and warmth of a fire to share knowledge, recount our days to one another, and ward off the peril and uncertainty of darkness. By bringing discoveries and the fruits of labor to our fellows, our species at once expanded and preserved that which makes us human. Our collective spirit still yearns for this collaboration, to grow and prosper together, in the face of a sinister and relentless commodification that steals both our most fundamental needs for life and the purest creative manifestations of the soul.

To walk through Buck's Rock is to enter a living museum of this enduring human need, spanning eras of prosperity and hardship, and detached from the imposed compulsion to profit from all that we create. Even our refuse finds its way into willing hands driven by inspired minds. From it, art is wrought for art's sake, tools restored to usefulness, and the waste of industry spared interment in a landfill. Here, our collective spirit is fed, and here the fire is bright.

The Sculpture Shop: A Collaborative Poem Written by Campers and Counselors

The Sculpture Shop looks like fun—a shimmer of golden sparks erupting and a table full of friends. It looks like a place where you can spend your entire day and not leave—dirt and rust and shoe-stamped papers—a worn-in space well-loved and cozy.

The Sculpture Shop sounds like the rattling of the air compressor and the buzzing of the MIG-welder. Campers chat around the table as the pneumatic tool hisses, interrupted by the sporadic outbursts of “NOISE!”

Roscoe Adair

The Sculpture Shop smells like propane, wax, and red hot metal. Salt and acetylene fill your nose as the space whirrs with creativity and excitement.

The Sculpture Shop tastes like glowing metal, warped from heat. Sparks and rust collect on your tongue—a mouthful of steel as a souvenir.

The Sculpture Shop feels HOT and LOUD and always busy—the edge of a rusted piece of sheet metal; the radiant heat of a torch; the warm joy after the counselors’ silly jokes. It’s sweaty and grimy. It’s a shared moment with your best friend and the pride after a job well done.

The Sculpture Shop is a lot of things, but mostly, it feels like Home.

Sewing

Dog 1:2 - "From the depths of abandoned textile mills, landfills, thrift stores, and your grandmother's garage comes a world of sustainably sourced fabric and clothing, fighting against the injustices of fast fashion and instant gratification. Colors, textures, patterns galore transformed into a plethora of concepts that expand the mind's eye. We give fabric a new life." Heed the words of our savior, Moon.

Weaving

There is a reason why loom rhymes with womb. Weaving and rebirth are deeply interconnected. Each form of fiber art is connected to a different stage in the journey of a sheep's wool from raw fleece to yarn to fabric. We treat all materials as separate but interconnected. Weaving is the metaphorical womb of the metaphorical sheep.

Re: Pub - A disconnected blurb by L Rosenthal

This year's Publications blurb was in jeopardy because of a schedule-bound camper who could not come up with anything before the deadline day... HOWEVER, they decided to REBIRTH an idea which they had nestled into their head a few weeks back: HAIKUS!

Bob goes to pub shop
He sees his Ricoh again
Nothing much to say

Zoe runs the show
Working hard to oversee Projects big and small

Dami knows her stuff
Photoshop, InDesign, more
Artistic and cool

Avery writes tales
Characters, fantasy worlds
And more things to come

Aranza makes art
Animated, digital
And the layout too

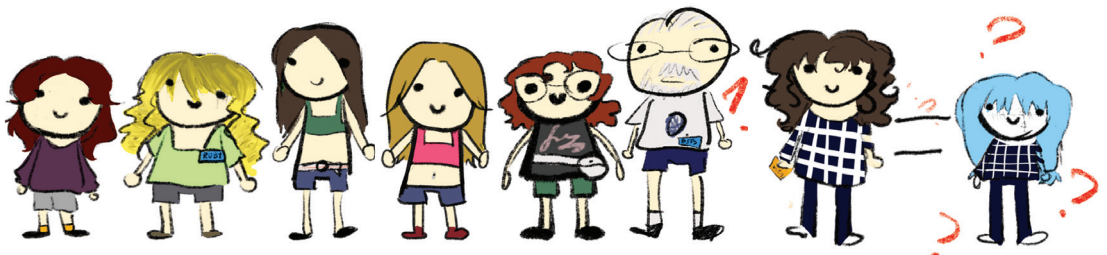

Ela has the prompts
That make this pub shop complete
Guiding your writing

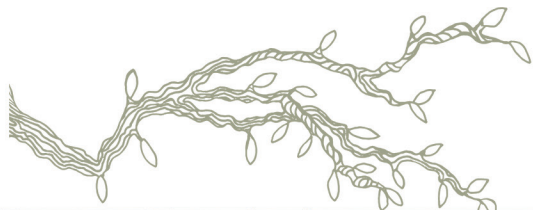

Ruby is a gem
Of poetry and workshops
She lights up pub lots

You know that one bowl of really small words in pub? What if that was a metaphor of the writing/poetry renaissance that they are having. It could be filled to the brim with words that start with the prefix "re:"

Reset
Remake
Redo
Rejoin
Recreate

Rebirth.

Fridge: ginger ale, seltzer, iced tea, Sprite. All the chips. All the Skittles except sour. (Note: we need a new delivery.) Pocky: strawberry and chocolate; no more cookies and cream. KitKats and Hershey bars. Ice pops: red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple, pineapple, watermelon, mango. Speaker on, playlist started — if you bang on the windows we will not open any faster — and lines open!

Out of ginger ale, but we've got Sprite. Out of Sprite, but we've got seltzer.

Campers, you're good to go! We've got more Sprite, but it's warm. Do you have your name tag? CITs, you can head out. Speaker off, fridge restocked, light off, doors locked.

We should probably make a new menu for tomorrow.

Garden

In the northern extremity of Buck's Rock is a Garden teeming with resilient wildlife, plants and soil. Here in this patch prevails the cycle of life: birth, growth, loss, decay, rebirth. In this garden we have plentiful harvest from the potato mounds, peach trees, cucumber vines, flowering perennials, corn stalks, herbaceous aromatics and rampant volunteer plants. We encounter animals we didn't know lived near us; black bears and raccoons scavenging through waste, wild turkeys picking berries before they are ripe, a band of coyotes whose yip-howls echo from the forest. We watch alien insects touch down on the flower landing pads and flap their wings as they reach for nectar and pollen.

In this patch of life and loss we plant seeds that might not germinate, we ferment herbs that might rot, we raise seedlings and saplings that might perish, we monitor nests that might be abandoned, we perform experiments that might fail, we might wait patiently for fruits that might not ripen, and expect the sun that won't come out. Here we learn from the three-sisters who dance together and stand strong during thunder storms and drought. Here, we learn to let go — we learn how abundance comes from impermanence and unpredictability.

If we show up and we are patient, the wise Barred Owl might make an appearance and perch on the telephone pole to overlook the garden. It might perform swift and explicit acts against the mice and chipmunks or persistently screech to impress potential mates. With every hoot it honors the spirits of the lost downy woodpecker, the animal farm goats and the escaped guinea fowl and as it flies from one Oak branch to another; it protects the foliage from the voracious spongy moth caterpillars.

Birth, growth, loss, decay, rebirth.

"I'd like a new nametag."

The person behind the window pauses. Their face scrunches up.

"You'd like a new nametag?" They give the camper a narrow look. They've heard this request a lot, though usually with a little more urgency, however feigned. "We try to avoid handing those out unless it's really necessary."

"I know." The camper smiles. Their expression is easygoing. Their name isn't especially important – It was different yesterday, different still the day before that, and they'll probably change it again tomorrow. Where the rigidity of the world outside keeps them bound to a single identity (regardless of how well it does or doesn't fit), this place leaves them free to explore. To discover. To face each day reborn as someone else. Maybe one day, they'll figure out who they are.

"I'm trying something new."

Clown is a shop of rebirth.

Nothing is ever the same but you always carry a piece of what you've done with you through every improv scene and sketch that follows after. The shop is built from generations of laughter, of signatures on the wall, programs, props.

Every session we create from nothing something new, which ceases to exist after the lights go down, after a swipe occurs.

But remains in memory in the props we keep, and the lines we quote, every year adding onto what came before.

Comedy is universal, but so independent, and it changes every place you go. People know the same games, by different names, different rhythms, but all with the same goal: of comedy, connection, and community.

“I’m putting you in an old people’s home.” “Thank you,” two Marlo(we)’s too many, the Savages being savages, the buzzle, speaking in verse, High School Musical, up your butt and around the corner, “I’m gonna slap the shizzle out of you.” Ingrid’s voices, vegetarian, the sibling cancan, the whole family tree, I am...fruit, do you give birth? Ingrid being a sneaky link, I take an umbrella you, the bear’s ass, MEOOW, what sound does your gun make? Flingo the bear, camp life, the politician chant, “Close the bear!” what a talent, death by playing cards, unquenchable laughter, mY bOnDs, you hit me in my Jew, Marlo caressing my script for Oreos, ballroom dancing, tech activities, the Cloisters Hair, Scott, Antonia, Lizzie, and, of course, Ernst and Ilse.

Truth

By Paloma Chang Naftulin

Truth is like the hills
Rolling up and down,
Through the blanket of green
Adding excitement to everything
Truth is like the ocean
Dreadful and powerful,
Yet peaceful
And sometimes a very, very,
quiet whisper

Venetia Clark

Fear

Running fast
Not looking back
It's right behind me
My feet won't go slack

Tripping on branches
Night sky up above
I faceplant suddenly
There's a rip in my glove

I have to keep going
It's catching up with me
I scramble back up
And start to climb a tree

Scaling upwards
Towards the sky
I don't feel its breathing
I let out a sigh

But I shouldn't have done that
And I hear myself scream
A sharp pain in my leg
Could it all be a dream?

Everything goes dark
I hear ringing in my ears
I tumble and turn
All I think of is fear.

Enchanting

In the forest one day
There's quite a light breeze
It's an early spring morning
There's color in the trees.

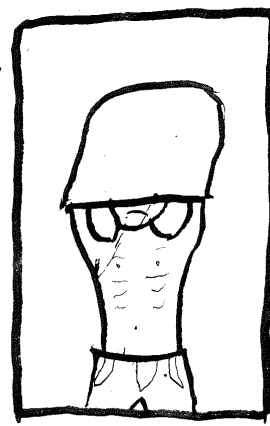

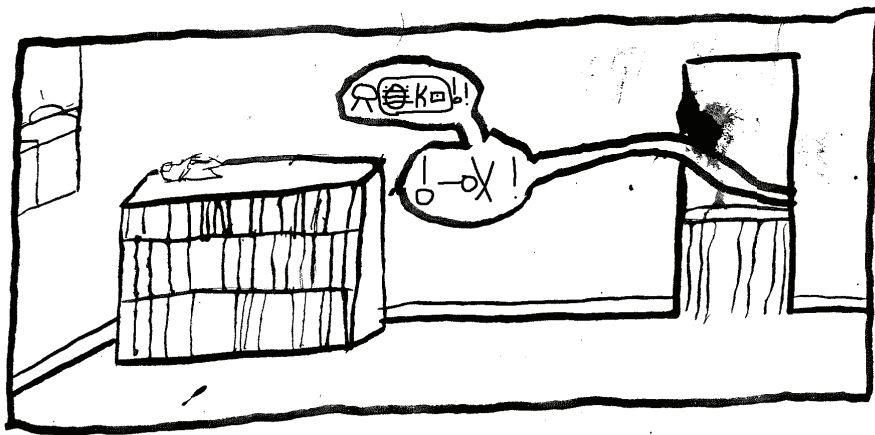

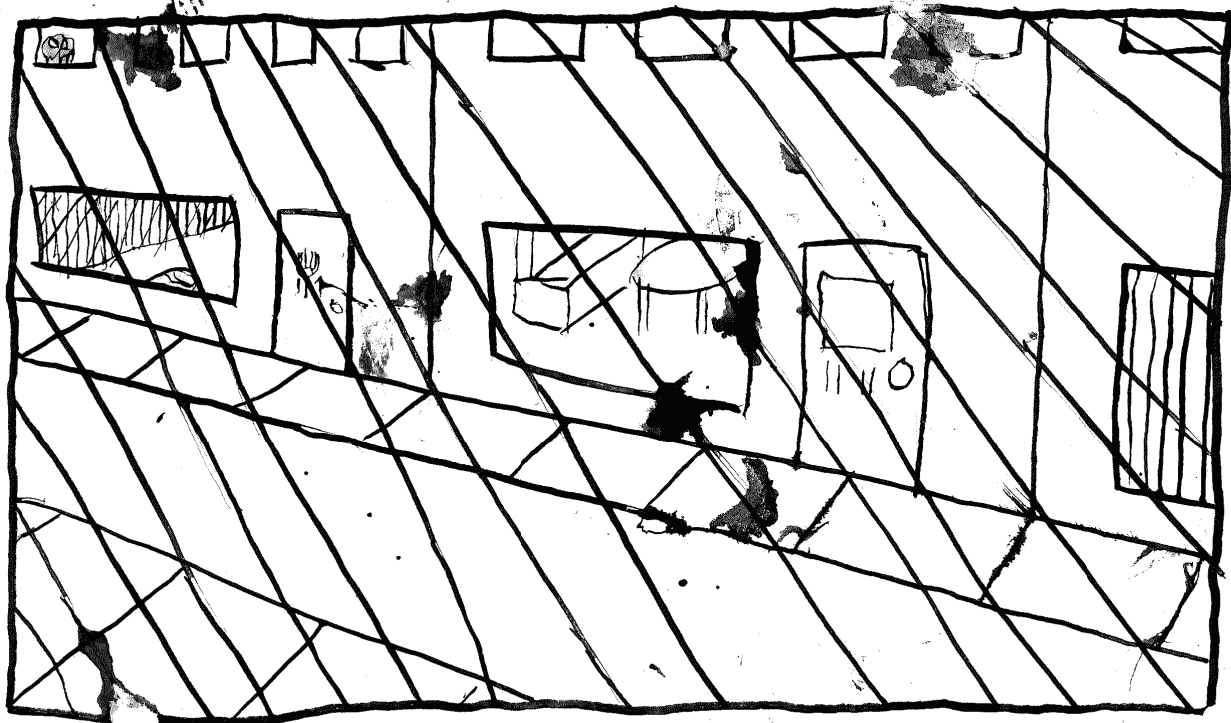

Flowers are growing
Birds are tweeting
The sun is glowing
The winter's depleting

The stream is cool
The animals are at rest
A bear cub drools
In his hibernation nest

Sunset is upon us
There's fireflies dancing
Everything is just
This is enchanting.

The Game

By L Rosenthal

I Lost The Game too many times at this Camp.
I've been playing since last year.
Somehow I found out about it before I came here for the first time.

I thought I had a Thirty-Minute Reset.
Turns out it was only Five.
I should've known sooner but it's just not that kind of camp.

However, some people have already Won the Game.
I don't necessarily know how but you could say that if you'd like.

Nevertheless, I will always still be playing no matter how hard I try
Now think about DND-

OOPS!

You Lost The Game!

Mom, a poem inspired by Mary Elizabeth Frye's Do Not Stand At My Grave And Weep

Val Wehring

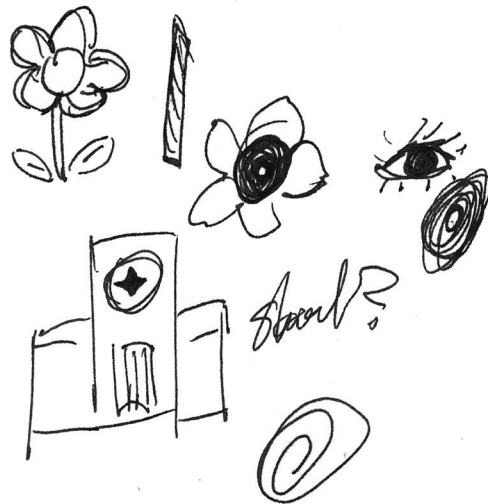

People say to look for her in the moon and stars
But she's not there,
She's on Mars

They say they see her in the sky
I see her in fire, earth
Rage and shy

Her ashes jarred and sealed away
I feel her warmth on a summer's day

They say her words are carved on stone
I hear her speak in the weather's tone

I will not go to her grave to cry
She was not there before she died.

Avalene Morrison

Josie Feldstein-Gardner

Questions

And now it is quiet
The eye of the storm
I open the Bible
But the pages are torn
It's all far too blurry
And it happens too fast
I'm starting to feel like I'm the outcast
Words spread like fire
But I'm missing the spark
I better get home before it gets dark
Now the pages are turning
But the chapters are gone
Somewhere in this story
I should belong
I can lie my way in
And fight my way out
I want to keep growing
But from my own sprout
I pray for my future
But my head is too loud

It looks like I'm going the long way around

Nature's rhythm

I am one with nature's land
The ocean and I walk hand in hand
I am one with the grass and leaves I fly through the clouds and flourish in the trees
I whisper in the willows and glide through cascades
I climb every mountain and rustle in the shade
In the moonlight, I shimmer, aglow,
One with nature's rhythm, I dance, I grow.

JUAN DAVID TRUJILLO SALAZAR

My broken heart

My broken heart.
only one can fix.
that one is my chosen one.
and I think I have found it.
it might be short.
it might be long.
it might be big.
it might be small.

but whatever it has mended my heart.
but whatever you did it has mended my heart.
so I will try not to be gone By night.

Ryan James Connors

Do you remember that first day?
It was a half day,
Wednesday, February 28th
We were both so young

Eyes barely open yet Finding it hard to comprehend everything
Our parents did this to us,
Shoved us onto this unfamiliar land

We weren't even thirteen
Thrown onto a battlefield
Right or wrong
True or False

It didn't even matter Too lost to care about getting ourselves into trouble
Too abandoned to care about dress codes.
Nothing but a blank stare when they told us to act like young girls are supposed to

Eventually, despite everything, you found me,
Recognized me, saw me,
Not just the outside.

You saw my pain, you saw my heart, you saw my tears
You asked me my name, I asked for yours
And just like that; the gunshots faded

We talked for hours
And I trusted you
We shared secrets
You were like the pink to my blue

You like TV girl?
Oh, I like them too
I loved you like a brother,
Only if we knew

They called us the suicide squad
We called ourselves us
We told them we were mature enough,
Knowing we would end up on the floor

But see if we cared
We knew who we were
If not, we knew we loved each other.
And we wouldn't forget.

We were like fire
Blazing through the crowd
Like a newly discovered snake
Climbing the food chain

Almost at the top,
Never losing grasp
Until they came back
They came back for me

Just as soon as it had started
It was over.
I was pulled from you like a kite yanked down from the sky Torn from you like skin ripped from bones

We knew it would happen eventually
But five months of chaos
We lost each other.

But I will never forget you Your eyes burnt into mine from the fire in me you fed
Brown eyes, Green eyes
White, red, black Nails

How could I ever forget
My Burning flame
Of a best friend?

- Charlie Goldman

I AM EVERYTHING

Annelise Kopfer

I am the breeze before the storm,
I am the light after dark,
I am the giver, and I am taken from.

I am a friend when needed,
I am energy when tired,
I am the giver, and I am taken from.

I am the wind on a hot day,
I am water to quench thirst,
I am the giver, and I am taken from.

I am the trees that stand tall,
I am the grass that thrives in a drizzle,
I am the giver, and I am taken from.

I am everything that is taken,
Taken until I am nothing.
I am nothing.
I am the giver, and I am taken from.

I am nothing.
No.
I am everything.

I am the giver, and I am taken from.
But still, I am everything.

I am all the good things and the bad,
I am the consequences,
The achievements,
The wind, The rain,
The thunder, The lightning,
The terror, The fear,
The hope, The joy,
The excitement, The anxiety,
The depression, The recovery,
The passion, the bravado,
The understanding, the loving,

The love.
The love.
I am everything.
I am the giver, and I give.
